TIPS FOR BUYING FROM THE ORGANICS SECTION AT THE MARKET

By Erin Rhoads
Queen Vic Market Sustainability Ambassador
@therogueginger

I like to prepare for the coming months by buying extra organics and stocking up my pantry. A great tip is to check the 'bargain boxes' at each of the organic stalls for left over summer produce that can be bottled and eaten when you're craving a taste of sunshine. Also making the most of bulk foods like organic and biodynamic lentils, chickpeas, beans and a range of oats, rice and flours will help see you through the soup and porridge season. Explore the organic section of the Market in I Shed.

MARKET RENEWAL MILESTONES

Significant progress has been made on key market renewal projects including the on-site restoration of the heritage sheds with J to M sheds now returned to their former glory.

Staged works are currently taking place across Sheds C and D, with all 12 open-air sheds to be restored by the end of 2022.

Construction of the city's largest new community hub and market car parking at the Munro site continues to make steady progress. The new 500-space customer car park on the corner of Therry and Queen streets is on track for delivery mid-year.

JOHN TRIPODI

QV Nut Co

How did QV Nut Co begin?

Our stall was originally my grandfather's, he was a fruiterer at the Market in the early 1930s. He passed away in 1957 and my father inherited the business and decided to change the stall to a nut stand. At the age of 83 my dad decided to retire and so I took it over.

Aside from nuts, what else do you sell at QV Nut Co?

We sell a huge variety of Australian and imported nuts including raw, roasted and chocolate covered nuts, plus dried fruit, dried beans, seeds, snack foods, coffee and a large selection of spices. Our fresh, 100% natural peanut butter is also popular, it's made right here at my stall!

What do you love most about Queen Victoria Market?

I love the Market. I've grown up here so it's like my second home. You get to know the customers and meet new people from all over the world. It's like a big extended family.

Find QV Nut Co
in B Shed.

MELBOURNE BOOK MARKET

GREEN RENAISSANCE EXHIBITION

26 March – 5 April

📍 Food Court

In about 60 years, the world will run out of quality topsoil, the non-renewable resource we currently rely on to grow 95% of our food. Green Renaissance is a speculation about the future of food and farming. In 2090 Melbourne, artificial food is grown with the help of machines in magnetically-levitating organic structures to avoid contamination from our toxic environment. Designed by RMIT students, this exhibition is free to view in the Market's Food Court.
